KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Dr. Perry Schoon

Dean of the College of Education & Allied Professions

We would like to welcome the new Dean of the College of Education & Allied Professions! Prior to his appointment at WCU, Dr. Schoon served as the Senior Associate Dean in the College of Education at the University of Texas at Arlington. He has also served as interim associate dean of the northern campuses for the College of Education at Florida Atlantic University, as well as department chair of the Department of Instructional Technology and Research, and vice president of the faculty assembly. He taught previously at Illinois State University and in junior and senior high schools in Tampa, Fla. He earned his bachelor's degree in technology education from Illinois State University in 1989, master's degree in technology education from Ball State University in 1990, and doctorate in educational administration from Illinois State in 1997. Dr. Schoon's research has resulted in two top paper awards. One of these papers, entitled Selection of an Instructional Management System, was awarded the Top Paper Award in the Educational Leadership strand at the 1999 annual Society of Information Technology in Education International Conference. The other paper, entitled Designing Multimedia and Web-Based Units for Technology Integration: Motivation and Student Learning Styles, was awarded the Top Paper Award at the 1999 annual meeting of the World Conference on the WWW and Internet. Dr. Schoon traces his career to his high school industrial arts teacher, Russ Furr, who mentored him and his interest in technology education and introduced him to a professor who worked in the field. "It is because of him that I now understand that teacher recruitment truly does start in high school." He and his wife, Kelly, have been married for 12 years and have two daughters, 9-year-old Rylee and 5-year-old Sawyer.

GUEST SPEAKER

Amie Dean

Behavior Management Consultant & National Trainer

Amie Dean is a Certified Lead Consultant and National Trainer in behavior management techniques. She received her MA Ed from Cambridge College in the area of Middle School Education. Upon completion of her degree, Amie taught at both the elementary and middle school levels. She has been privileged to teach students with wide-ranging abilities, including students with emotional/behavior disorders, learning disabilities, and autism. To further her qualifications in the area of working with Special Needs students, Amie received her National Board Certification as an Exceptional Needs Specialist. Currently, Amie provides classroom teachers, administrators, program supervisors, and other central office personnel with behavior management strategies and techniques based on the De-Escalation Model developed by Dr. Terry W. Alderman. Along with these techniques, Amie also focuses on motivating urban students, implementing multiple intelligences in the classroom, and relaying the importance of cultural diversity.

About CSBT

The College of Education and Allied Professions (CEAP) at Western Carolina University has long recognized that effective support for beginning teachers must be provided in order to improve retention rates and teacher quality. Western Carolina understands that beginning teachers want and need a variety of support—emotional, procedural, technical, and instructional—and that no one person or unit can provide all of these supports.

In 2005, Western Carolina's Board of Trustees established the Center for the Support of Beginning Teachers (CSBT). Housed in CEAP, the Center is designed to address identified needs of Western North Carolina beginning teachers and build upon established partnerships, programs, and past grant-funded initiatives by consolidating and formalizing new teacher support.

The Center provides resources and professional development activities tailored to teachers in WNC. Data are also collected examining the effects of mentoring and induction programs on new teacher retention. The Center and its school partners seek external funding in the form of grants to further support its activities.

Mission

The mission of the Center for the Support of Beginning Teachers is to address the need for an adequate supply of highly qualified teachers by supporting the professional development of beginning teachers and their transition to the classroom.
