“Degrees are great, but internships make a difference.” –US News

Attention: All Social Work, Psychology, and Sociology Seniors

The North Carolina Council on Developmental Disabilities (NCCDD) awarded WCU a grant to improve school transition outcomes for people with intellectual disabilities.

This grants needs 2 student interns for Spring 2014 to help with this initiative

Reasons why this is the internship for you:

- Receive training and hands-on experience with people with intellectual disabilities and the research that develops special education programs and transition services.

  This is VITAL knowledge for all students looking for public school employment!

- Apply what you learn in the classroom to real life cases.

- Prepare for your future by networking with professionals and have the necessary knowledge of interprofessional training and collaboration.

- Be a part of a project that is improving policy change for young adults with Intellectual Disabilities.
