Seventh Annual Symposium
Integrating Indigenous Knowledge, Language, Health and Environment
September 22-23, 2016
CALL FOR POSTERS, Abstract due June 15, 2016

Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, North Carolina
Health and Human Sciences Building

'The Importance of Time and Place'

Rooted in the Mountains: Valuing our Common Ground emphasizes the connection between local and traditional knowledge with health and environmental issues. This is an interdisciplinary forum where ethnography, literature, art, music, Native and Western science converge.

Abstract Guidelines: email abstract to: Amy McKenzie (amckenzie@wcu.edu)
- Clearly state the central research question and/or purpose of the project; 250-300 word limit.
- Provide brief, relevant scholarly or research context (no actual citations required).
- Provide a brief description of the research methodology.
- State initial questions, conclusions or expected results. Include your title and your name.
- Include well-written and edited text (no images or graphics).

Poster Presentation Guidelines:
- Students as well as other scholars and community members are eligible to present.
- Paper displays only (36x48 inches), not electronic or any other physical form.
- Poster session will be held on Saturday, September 24, 2016. If accepted for display, presenters should be available to attend.

Conference website: rootedinthemeatns.wcu.edu