

Cullowhee NATIVE PLANT Conference

July 17 -20, 2024

The Cullowhee Native Plant Conference, hosted by Western Carolina University, is dedicated to the advancement of knowledge and application of native plants in conservation, landscape design, horticulture, and environmental science education.

The conference is held on the university's campus and has a long history of connecting conservation and design professionals, gardeners, educators, and students to cutting edge ideas in the protection and proliferation of native plants. On behalf Western Carolina University, we warmly invite you to join us this summer and become a lifelong fan of the Cullowhee Native Plant Conference!

Scholarship Program

Scholarships to the conference are awarded annually to students, beginning professionals, K-12 environmental science teachers, and interns at public gardens, nature centers, and parks.
