

Teacher Education Diversity Portfolio

What is it?

CEAP provides a tiered approach for teacher candidates to develop their cultural competence throughout their time at WCU. The Teacher Education Diversity Portfolio which provides co-curricular educational experiences to undergraduate teacher education students, is one of the ways CEAP supports this growth in cultural competence.

What do you have to do?

Candidates experience, participate in, and reflect upon diversity-related events and engage in field experiences in diverse settings. Students are encouraged to attend and engage in DegreePlus experiences focused on cultural responsiveness.

How can you learn more?

View the Diversity Portfolio document detailing the requirements for each of the three tiers.

How do I find events?

For a list of current events to participate in, visit WCU Engage.

Do you have questions?

Questions can be directed to faculty in the School of Teaching & Learning or sent to CEAPDiversity@wcu.edu where they will be appropriately directed.

The Teacher Education Diversity Portfolio provides co-curricular educational experiences to undergraduate teacher education students. Through completion of the requirements, students promote their knowledge, skills, and dispositions related to diversity and cultural competency. The College of Education & Allied Professions provides a tiered approach for teacher candidates to develop their cultural competence throughout their time at WCU. Candidates participate in and reflect upon diversity-related events and engage in field experiences in diverse settings. They are also encouraged to engage in DegreePlus experiences focused on cultural responsiveness.

Please review our document with details about the requirements for the different sections of the Diversity Portfolio. For a list of current events that students can participate in, visit our Diversity Dialogue Facebook page.

Questions can be directed to the faculty in the School of Teaching & Learning or sent to CEAPDiversity@wcu.edu.