

Professor named Fulbright peer reviewer

Anna Fariello, curator of the craft revival digital collection and visiting associate professor at Western Carolina University, recently was named museology specialist peer reviewer for the United States Fulbright Commission.

Fariello is a former Fulbright Senior Scholar to Latin America, where she taught courses in collections and administration, and conducted a study of government-run museums in Panama.

The Craft Revival Project, funded by the North Carolina State Library and led by WCU, aims to create a Web-based, digital archive of craft items and materials related to the craft revival movement of the late 1800s and early 1900s.

*Maintained by the Office of Public Relations
Last modified: Tuesday, Dec. 4, 2007*