

Craft Movement recounted

ASHEVILLE — During the late 19th and early 20th centuries, a revived interest in handmade items brought new income to mountain family chairmakers. The Craft Revival Project at Western Carolina University has been documenting the sociological and economic movement known as the Craft Revival.

Project director Anna Fariello will recount the history of the movement with a focus on woodcarving and woodworking at Asheville Hardware, 91 Biltmore Ave., from 12:30-1:30 Wednesday. Call 252-8088 for more details.
